Larsen HVAC & Plumbing Earns Rheem Pro Certified Partner Designation

August 06, 2026

WEST JORDAN, UT - August 06, 2026 -
Larsen HVAC & Plumbing, a residential HVAC and plumbing contractor based in West Jordan, Utah, has earned Rheem Pro Certified Partner designation, a manufacturer-recognized status that reflects demonstrated installation standards, technical training, and ongoing commitment to equipment quality on behalf of residential customers throughout Salt Lake County.

The certification places Larsen HVAC & Plumbing among a select group of HVAC contractors in Utah that have met Rheem's criteria for professional installation and service competency. For homeowners in West Jordan and surrounding communities, the designation serves as an independent confirmation that the company's technicians have been evaluated against manufacturer-defined benchmarks rather than self-reported credentials alone.

"This recognition matters to us because it is not something we gave ourselves," said Shawn Larsen, owner of Larsen HVAC & Plumbing. "Rheem sets the standard, and our technicians met it. For a homeowner trying to choose between contractors, that is a meaningful distinction."

Rheem is one of the most widely installed residential HVAC equipment brands in the United States, and its Pro Certified Partner program is designed to identify contractors whose installation practices align with the technical requirements that support long-term equipment performance and warranty validity. HVAC manufacturers increasingly tie warranty coverage to proper installation and maintenance by qualified technicians, making contractor certification a practical consideration for homeowners investing in new systems.

Larsen HVAC & Plumbing serves residential customers across West Jordan, South Jordan, Sandy, Taylorsville, West Valley City, Murray, Midvale, and Draper, operating out of its West Jordan headquarters at 6752 South Airport Road. The company was founded in February 2017 by Shawn Larsen, who holds an EPA 608 Universal certification and an Associate's Degree in Applied Sciences from Salt Lake Community College, and operates under a Utah Division of Professional Licensing specialty contractor license.

The Rheem Pro Certified Partner status adds to the company's existing compliance framework, which includes adherence to the 2021 Utah State Mechanical Code governing HVAC system installations across Utah, and familiarity with the permitting and inspection process administered by the West Jordan Building and Safety Division. For homeowners undertaking system replacements or new installations in West Jordan, permitted work is subject to city inspection, a process Larsen HVAC & Plumbing incorporates as a standard part of its installation workflow.

"Permit-required installations get inspected for a reason," Shawn Larsen noted. "It is an independent check that protects the homeowner. We have always built that into our process because it is the right way to do the work, not just the required way."

Beyond the Rheem certification, the company offers a range of services that extend from air conditioner installation and repair to furnace replacement, duct work, thermostat installation, indoor air quality systems, and full residential plumbing. Its diagnostic capabilities include drain and duct camera scoping, which allows technicians to identify system issues that would not be visible through standard inspection, a particularly relevant tool for older residential properties in established West Jordan neighborhoods such as Copper Hills and the Jordan Landing area.

The company also supports homeowners navigating utility rebate programs available in Utah, including Rocky Mountain Power's Wattsmart Homes initiative and Enbridge Gas Utah's ThermWise program, both of which offer financial incentives for qualifying high-efficiency HVAC equipment installations. As a Rheem Pro Certified Partner, Larsen HVAC & Plumbing is positioned to assist customers in selecting equipment that meets both rebate eligibility criteria and long-term efficiency goals.

For residential customers managing the cost of system upgrades, the company offers flexible financing options through Synchrony Financial, as well as VIP Protection Plans that provide ongoing maintenance scheduling and priority service access. All qualifying full-system installations include a ten-year parts warranty and a lifetime heat exchanger warranty, with warranty registration handled directly by the company on the customer's behalf.

Larsen HVAC & Plumbing's service model centers on having certified installers, rather than sales representatives, conduct all in-home system evaluations. This ensures that homeowners in West Jordan and across Salt Lake County receive assessments grounded in technical knowledge of their specific equipment and home configuration, rather than generalized recommendations driven by sales targets.

The company maintains standard service hours from 8:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m. and offers 24/7 emergency service availability for urgent heating and cooling failures ? a capability that reflects the unpredictable nature of HVAC system breakdowns, which frequently occur outside normal business hours and during periods of peak seasonal demand along the Wasatch Front.
