IntroDrink Publishes Educational Content on Beauty and Anti-Aging Ingredients for Swiss Consumers

September 08, 2026

Zurich, Zurich - September 08, 2026 -
IntroDrink.ch, a Swiss online shop offering natural supplements, vitamins, superfoods, and natural cosmetics, has expanded its educational blog with articles covering ingredients commonly associated with beauty and anti-aging categories. The material forms part of an ongoing effort to provide Swiss consumers with reference information about natural dietary supplements.

The published content describes ingredients such as collagen, hyaluronic acid, biotin, OPC, astaxanthin, and CoQ10, all of which appear within the beauty and anti-aging product category. IntroDrink findings from its own catalog data indicate that these ingredients are among those featured across the shop's product listings, and the company has organized related educational articles to help consumers understand how such ingredients are typically used.

The blog articles address a range of topics that correspond to the shop's product categories, including vitamins for the immune system, minerals such as magnesium, natural approaches to sleep, collagen in relation to skin, omega-3 fatty acids, and detoxification. The company states that the content is intended as general information and does not constitute medical advice. Consumers are encouraged to consult qualified health professionals before beginning any supplement regimen.

IntroDrink vitamins are among the product categories referenced in the educational material, spanning options such as D3+K2, B12, B-Complex, Vitamin C Acerola, and Vitamin E. These are listed alongside minerals, plant compounds, superfoods, and natural cosmetics within the shop's catalog. Vegan and organic options are noted across several of the listed product lines.

The expanded educational program groups articles by category, reflecting the way the shop organizes its offerings. Categories include immune system support, fitness and performance, beauty and anti-aging, detox and cleansing, sleep and relaxation, vitamins, minerals, plant compounds, superfoods, and natural cosmetics. The company notes that any statements regarding the intended use of specific ingredients are subject to applicable Swiss food and supplement labeling requirements.

IntroDrink has stated that the educational content is drawn from published information about individual ingredients rather than from clinical studies conducted by the company. Where health-related topics are discussed, the material is presented as general background, and the company advises that individual outcomes may vary and that supplements are not intended to diagnose, treat, cure, or prevent any condition.

The company's blog structure is designed to allow consumers to locate articles relevant to particular product categories, and the shop maintains its catalog across the categories listed above. IntroDrink has indicated that additional articles will be added over time as the educational program continues.
